Sportfishing
Redondo Beach has long been a focus of activity along the California Coastline. From its former glory as a commercial shipping destination and roots in the timber shipping industry to its current incarnation as a tourist destination and recreational center for boating, fishing, and open space activity, and pristine beaches, Redondo Beach and King Harbor are authentically valued community assets.

The goal of this effort is to assemble a plan for King Harbor Sportfishing Pier Replacement that provides a community-driven vision for the future. The Final Design Plan developed as a result of the community outreach process will set the stage for the future waterfront identity, give the planning and design team’s direction on community needs, and set the stage for the regulatory processes.
